- 1. Outils de veille technologique
 - Agrégateurs & lecteurs RSS
 - Feedly : centralise les flux RSS de blogs, sites d'actu, et dev newsletters.
 - Inoreader : similaire à Feedly, très personnalisable.
 - Flipboard : style magazine, bonne découverte visuelle.
 - Plateformes sociales & communautés
 - Twitter : suivre les dev influents, hashtags comme #webdev, #javascript, #css...
 - Reddit (r/webdev, r/javascript, r/frontend) : discussions, news, projets open source.
 - Dev.to : articles et tutoriels écrits par la communauté dev.
 - Hacker News : tech, startups, innovation.
 - Newsletters spécialisées
 - JavaScript Weekly, Frontend Focus, CSS-Tricks Newsletter, Smashing Newsletter... Un bon mix à recevoir chaque semaine pour ne rien rater.
 - Outils de curation
 - Pocket : sauvegarder des articles pour plus tard, lire offline.
 - Raindrop.io : bookmarker et organiser liens avec tags et dossiers.
 - Plateformes de découverte de projets
 - GitHub Trending : projets populaires du moment.
 - Product Hunt : nouveautés tech & outils.

J'ai organisé la veille pour ce projet dans un dossier nommé Qwenta Menu Maker.

Les supports que j'ai utilisés sont :

- YouTube (Grafikart, YoanDev..)
- Les articles publiés par les éditeurs/développeurs
- Alerte Goolge
- ChatGPT
